Diseases and Medical Terms

The following are some of the causes of death found in these death records. The explanation of the cause of death was taken from The New American Pocket Medical Dictionary by Nancy Roper. 1978. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, the dictionary and other sources.

abscess - localized collection of pus produced by pyogenicorganisms. May be acute or chronic anasarca - serous infiltration of the cellular tissues and serous cavities; generalized edema, dropsy anemia - a disorder due to a deficiency in the number of red blood cells or of their hemoglobin content or both angina pectoris - severe but temporary attack of cardiac pain which may radiate to the arms aphthae - small grey areas surrounded by a ring of erythema: they occur in the mouth; ulceration is inevitable apoplexy - stroke, sudden unconsciousness usually caused by cerebral embolism, hemorrhage, or thrombosis. There is stertorous breathing, incontinence of urine and feces and a varying decree of hemiplegia (paralysis of one side of the body) ascites - a kind of dropsy, from askos, bag. Free fluid in the peritoneal cavity asthma - paroxysmal airways obstruction due to generalized narrowing of the bronchi which reverses either spontaneously or as the result of treatment ataxia - defective muscular control resulting in irregular and jerky movements. Staggering.
atrophy - wasting, emaciation diminution in size and function biliary - pertaining to bile brights disease - inflamation of the kidneys. Nephritis bronchitis - inflamation of the bronchi; may be primary or secondary, acute or chronic; excessive secretion of mucous following an overgrowth of the mucus glands, sometimes with an added infection cancer - a general term which covers many malignant growths in many parts of the body carbuncle - an acute inflamation (usually caused by Staphylococcus) involving several hair follicles and surrounding subcutaneous tissue, forming an extensive slough with several discharging sinuses catarrh - inflamation of a mucous membrane with constant flow of mucus cholera - an acute epidemic disease, caused by Vibrio comma, occurring in the East. The main symptoms are the evacuation of copious 'rice water' stools accompanied by agonizing cramp and severe collapse; Spread mainly by contaminated water overcrowding and insanitary conditions cholera infantum - intestinal disease in babies cholera morbus - gastroenteritis chorea - disease manifested by irregular and spasmodic movements, beyond the patient's control. Even voluntary movements are rendered jerky and ungainly. Other childhood names: "rheumatic chorea," St. Vitus's Dance" or Sydenham's chorea; adult form, Huntington's chorea climacteric - in the female, the menopause or change of life. The end of the period of possible sexual reproduction, as evidenced by the cessation of menstrual periods. Other bodily and mental changes may occur. Corresponding periods occur in men, is called the male c.

congestion - Hyperemia. Passive congestion results from obstruction or slowing down of venous return, as in the lower limbs or the lungs.

consumption - popular term for pulmonary tuberculosis (which consumed the body) convolutions - folds, twists or coils as found in the intestine, renal tubules and surface of brain.

convulsions - involuntary contractions of muscles resulting from abnormal cerebral stimulation from many causes. Occur with or without loss of consciousness.

croup - laryngeal obstruction. Croupy breathing in a child is often called 'stridulous', meaning noisy or harsh-sounding. Narrowing of the airway which gives rise to the typical attack with crowing inspiration may be the result of edema or spasm, or both.

cyanosis - a bluish tinge manifested by hypoxic tissue, observed most frequently under the nails, lips and skin. Always due to lack of oxygen.

cystitis - inflammation of the urinary bladder, exciting cause usually bacterial debility - weakness, infirmity diarrhea - deviation from established bowel rhythm characterized by an increase in frequency and fluidity of the stools.

dilation - stretching or enlargement. May occur physiologically, pathologically or be induced artificially.

diphtheria - an acute, specific infectious, notifiable disease caused by corynebacterium diptheriae. Characterized by a grey, adherent, false membrane growing on a mucous surface, usually that of the upper respiratory tract. Locally there is pain, swelling and may be suffocation. Systemically the toxins attack the heart muscle and nerves.

dropsy - anasarca, ascites, edema; a collection of water in a large cavity dysentery- inflamation of the bowel with evacuation of blood and mucus, accompanied by tenesmus and colic edema - dropsy. Abnormal infiltration of tissues with fluid enteritis - inflamation of the intestines - currently preferred term to Crohn's disease epilepsy - result from disordered electrical activity of brain. The "fit" is caused by an abnormal electrical discharge that disturbs cerebration and usually results in loss of consciousness erysipelas - an acute, specific, infectious disease, in which there is a spreading, streptococcal inflamation of the skin and subcutaneous tissues, accompanied by fever and constitutional disturbances fits - convulsions

flux - any excessive flow of any of the body excretions gall-stones - concretions formed within the gall bladder gangrene - death of part of the tissues of the body. Usually the result of inadequate blood supply, but occasionally due to direct injury, or infection.

gastritis - inflamation of the stomach, especially the mucous membrane lining gonorrhea - an infectious disease of venereal origin in adults.
gravel - a sandy deposit which, if present in the bladder, may be passed with the urine.
Haemophilus - a genus of bacteria. Small Gram-negative rods which show much variation in shape. They are strict parasites, and accessory substances present in blood, are usually necessary for growth. They are found in the respiratory tracts of vertebrates and are often associated with acute and chronic disease hemorrhage - the escape of blood from a vessel hernia - the abnormal protrusion of an organ, or part of an organ, through an aperture in the surrounding structures, commonly the protrusion of an abdominal organ through a gap in the abdominal wall.
Hodgkin's disease - progressive disease of reticuloendothelial system, shown in generalized enlargement of lymphatic glands and splenomegaly. Other features are recurrent fever, anemia, and occasionally cutaneous manifestations. (form of cancer).
hypertrophy - increase in the size of tissues or structures, independent of natural growth influenza - an acute viral infection of the nasopharynx and respiratory tract which occurs in epidemic or pandemic form. intussusception - a condition in which one part of the bowel slips into (invaginates) the power part, causing intestinal obstruction. It occurs most often in infants.
intussusceptum - the invaginated portion of an intussusception jaundice - a condition characterized by a raised bilirubin level in the blood. Visible in the yellow skin, sclerae and mucosae la grippe - a form of influenza laryngitis - inflamation of the larynx. leukemia - now called malignant reticuloses. Blood disease in which the white cells are abnormal in type or number. lockjaw or tetanus - caused by Clostridium tetani, an anaecrobe which may be present in road dust and manure. Patient develops spasm and rigidity of muscles.
locomotor ataxia - the disordered gait and loss of sense of position in the lower limbs, which occurs in tabes dorsalis malaria - a tropical disease caused by one of the genus Plasmodium and carried by infected mosquitoes of the genus Anopheles. marasmus - wasting away of the body, especially that of a baby, without apparent cause (failure to thrive). Condition wherein a child is unable to absorb nutrition from food meninges - the surrounding membranes of the brain and spinal cord meningitis - inflamation of the meninges metritis - inflamation of the uterus miliary - resembling a millet seed. Miliary tuberculosis, a form in which tuberculosis nodules are widely disseminated throughout the organs and tissues of the body. mitral (insufficiency) - miter-shaped, as the valve between the left atrium and ventricle of the heart moron - a person of subnormal mentality. Not beyond the Binet age of 12 but having greater intelligence than an imbecile.
mortification - death of tissue (Gangrene)

nephritis - a term embracing a group of conditions in which there is either an inflammatory, or an inflammatory-like reaction, focal or diffuse, in the kidneys.
neuralgia - pain in the distribution of a nerve palsy - see paralysis paralysis - complete or incomplete loss of nervous function to a part of the body. This may be sensory, or motor or both pericarditis - inflamation of the outer, serous covering of the heart.
peritonitis - inflamation of the peritoneum, usually secondary to disease of one of the abdominal organs.
pertussis - an infectious disease of children with attacks of coughing which reach a peak of violence ending in an inspiratory whoop. The basis of the condition is respiratory catarrh an the organism responsible is Bordetella pertussis phlebitis - inflamation of a vein pleura - a thin serous membrane covering the surface of the lung and reflecting at the root of the lung, on to the chest wall.
pleurisy - inflamation of the pleura pneumonia - inflamation of the lung with production of alveolar exudate - two main types, lobar and broncho puerperal - pertaining to the period after childbirth puerperal sepsis - infection of the genital tract occurring within 21 days of abortion or childbirth remittent - increasing and decreasing at periodic intervals rheumatic - pertaining to rheumatism. Chorea. rheumatism - a non-specific term embracing a diverse group of diseases and syndromes which have in common, disorder or disease of connective tissue and hence usually present with pain, or stiffness, or swelling of muscles and joints.
rupture - tearing, splitting, bursting of a part. A popular name for hernia. scarlatina - infection by hemolytic streptococcus producing a rash.
scarlet fever - or scarlatina scrofula - tuberculosis of bone or lymph gland senile - senescence complicated by morbid processes–senility septicemia - the persistence and multiplication of living bacteria in the blood stream spasms - convulsive, involuntary muscular contractions spina bifida - a congenital defect in which the vertebral neural arches fail to close, so exposing the contents of the spinal canal posteriorly. spotted fever - cerebrospinal fever. Organism responsible is the meningococcus transferred by droplet infection. Occurs in epidemics.
stricture - a narrowing, especially of a tube or canal, due to scar tissue or tumor.
Saint Vitus Dance - chorea; nervous disorder which creates involuntary muscular contraction syphilis - the most severe venereal disease caused by Treponema pallidum tabes dorsalis - is a variety of neurosyphilis in which the posterior (sensory) columns of the spinal cord and the sensory nerve roots are diseased tetanus - a painful and often fateful infectious disease marked by tonic spasms of the voluntary muscles caused by the toxin of a microorganism. When confined to the muscles of the lower jaw it is called lockjaw thrush - see Candidiasis (disease caused by infection with species of Candida (yeast-like cells that form some filaments.) Effects mouth, throat, vagina, gut and skin tonsillitis - inflamation of the tonsils tremor - involuntary trembling tuberculosis - a specific , infective disease caused by Mycobacterium tuberculosis.

typhoid fever - an infectious fever usually spread by contamination of food, milk or water supplies with salmonella typhi, either directly by sewage, indirectly by flies, or by faulty personal hygiene typhus - an acute infectious disease characterized by high fever, a skin eruption, and severe headache. Spread by lice, ticks or fleas. Also known as Putrid Fever whooping cough - pertussis worms - ascarides, taenia, trichuris (worms in the intestines)
